Philosophy of The City Research Group

The Philosophy of the City Research Group takes the city as an object of study, focusing on its political, social, epistemological, metaphysical, ethical, and environmental dimensions.

From an interdisciplinary perspective, it incorporates disciplines such as urban planning, environmental science and studies, ecology, architecture, geography, and the arts. Research questions often deal with applied philosophy and ethics, and utilize established knowledge from other areas of study. All philosophical traditions are welcome.

Philosophy of the City 2022 – Turin is being sponsored by the Philosophy of the City Research Group in conjunction with LABONT – Center for Ontology of the University of Turin.
